School Law questions

1. How can we answer questions without being “political”, and how responsible are we if we do? Sometimes students come to us for help that is not exactly linked to the curriculum, and how are we allowed to help them? For example, immigration questions, sex-ed, violence, etc.
2. Students may get hurt when not under our supervision, like recess, lunch, art, etc. especially if a problem began in the classroom, but was not resolved. If a student gets hurt during these times, are we still responsible as well?
